Entry-Level Kindle Publisher – No College Degree or Prior Experience Needed

Description

Job Description

A growing digital publishing company is actively seeking Entry-Level Kindle Publishers to help create, format, and launch nonfiction eBooks on Amazon's Kindle Direct Publishing (KDP) platform. This is a remote, beginner-friendly position designed specifically for individuals with no college degree, no prior writing experience, and no background in publishing.

You'll use AI content tools, proven frameworks, and Kindle-optimized templates to build a personal catalog of books that can generate royalties on a monthly basis. The best part? You own everything you publish. That means no clients, no contracts, no deadlines — just real, scalable income based on your output.

Position Overview

As an Entry-Level Kindle Publisher, you'll follow a repeatable process to publish nonfiction books under your own name (or a pen name). Your role is centered around content coordination, formatting, and publishing—not traditional writing. Using AI tools, you'll assist in content development, structure each book using templates, and upload final versions for sale on Amazon.

You'll receive step-by-step training, plug-and-play systems, and templates for every part of the process, from idea validation to royalties.

Key Responsibilities

Research & Topic Selection

- Identify profitable nonfiction topics using our keyword and niche databases
- Analyze reader demand, competition levels, and sales potential on Amazon
- Choose topics with long-term relevance and commercial viability

AI-Assisted Content Creation

- Input prompts into AI tools like ChatGPT to produce book content
- Edit and arrange AI-generated chapters to ensure readability and structure
- Ensure tone and style align with nonfiction best practices

Book Formatting

- Use pre-built templates to format your manuscript for Kindle devices
