Entry-Level Online Chat Assistant – Remote Role for Beginners

Description

About the Opportunity

A fast-growing tech-enabled company specializing in direct-to-consumer services is currently recruiting Online Chat Assistants to join their distributed customer experience team. This is a text-only support position, meaning you'll never have to make calls or attend meetings. The job is remote, beginner-friendly, and doesn't require a college degree or any professional background. With structured onboarding, helpful templates, and a supportive backend team, this role is ideal for those seeking to break into remote work on flexible terms.

Your Daily Role in the Support Team

Chat With Customers via Web Interface

Each day, you'll log into a secure dashboard and respond to live chat messages from website visitors. These messages can include product questions, return policies, login help, and order tracking. Everything is done through typing — no phones, no video, no awkward conversations.

Use Prewritten Scripts for Consistency

You'll have access to a rich knowledge base and preapproved message templates. These tools make it easy to respond professionally even if you've never worked in support before.

Redirect and Escalate Complex Cases

When a customer needs help beyond what you're authorized to do (like processing a refund), you'll flag the conversation and transfer it to a senior team member. Your job is to provide the first layer of assistance quickly and accurately.

Log Details After Each Chat

When a conversation ends, you'll tag the issue type (billing, order status, product info, etc.) and add a short summary for internal records. This helps the company track trends and continually improve the customer journey.
