Remote Article Writer – Join the Nonfiction Kindle Publishing Team (No Degree Required)

Description

Position Summary

A rapidly scaling digital publishing company is partnering with freelance talent to produce nonfiction Kindle content and is currently accepting applications for remote article writers. This role is designed for individuals who are passionate about structured, repeatable writing work—without the hustle of pitching, ghostwriting, or long-form editorial work. As a contributor, you'll support nonfiction book production by turning research summaries and AI-assisted outlines into refined Kindle-ready article content.

Whether you're transitioning into remote writing or simply want reliable project-based income from anywhere in the world, this role provides flexibility, clear instructions, and the chance to get paid for writing meaningful content without the need for a college degree or professional portfolio.

About the Client

Our client is a high-output Kindle publishing team focused on nonfiction niches including self-help, entrepreneurship, lifestyle, productivity, and wellness. Their success is built on a combination of AI-powered drafting, detailed templates, and structured workflows. They routinely publish multiple titles per week and rely on freelance writers to transform curated research and topic outlines into polished article-style book chapters.

You won't be writing ad copy, SEO blog posts, or clickbait. Instead, you'll be creating informative, structured educational articles that are assembled into Kindle books designed to help real readers solve problems, learn skills, or improve their lives.

Key Responsibilities

- Receive a topic brief and article structure based on curated research
- Use AI-assisted tools to prepopulate drafts (when applicable)
- Rewrite, refine, and finalize chapters that meet tone, grammar, and clarity standards
- Collaborate with a formatting team to ensure the final product is Kindle-ready
- Follow checklists to match chapter length, tone, and pacing expectations
- Apply feedback to improve and standardize future submissions

Each article you write contributes directly to a live book. These aren't content mills or throwaway blog jobs—your work becomes part of real nonfiction titles reaching Kindle readers globally.

- Monday: Assigned 3 article briefs (500–1000 words each) with suggested outlines
- Tuesday–Thursday: Write and revise each draft using Grammarly or Hemingway
- Friday: Submit final versions and receive notes on formatting or style
- Optional: Accept new briefs for the following week or take time off as needed

Writers typically complete 2–4 articles per week, with the option to scale up or down depending on availability.

Ideal Candidate Profile

- No degree required—just strong written English and ability to follow instructions
- Previous freelance, academic, or personal writing experience is helpful but not mandatory
- Comfortable with basic research and editing
- Familiar with tools like Google Docs, Grammarly, and content templates
- Self-motivated, deadline-aware, and open to receiving editorial feedback
- Passionate about nonfiction topics like productivity, mental health, parenting, or business

This Role is NOT For:

- Creative writers looking for fiction or narrative-based work
- Writers seeking byline or personal brand exposure
- Individuals unwilling to follow style guides and structure
- Those looking for one-off gigs rather than repeatable assignments

Training & Tools Provided

- Structured writing templates and outline formats
- Onboarding walkthrough with video and written materials
- Dedicated editor to support your first 3–5 projects
- Grammar and tone guides tailored for Kindle nonfiction readers
- Optional AI writing assistant to help organize your ideas

Compensation and Pay Structure

- Flat pay per article: $35–$55 based on topic and word count
- Payments issued weekly via PayPal or Wise
- No fees, bidding, or invoicing—work is assigned via a freelancer portal
- Bonuses available for high-quality or fast-turnaround submissions
- Long-term writers may receive bulk project assignments for consistent earnings

FAQs

Do I have to come up with article topics?

No. Every project includes a brief, research materials, and a chapter title. You're never expected to ideate or pitch.

Is this role client-facing?

No. You will only interact with the editorial manager and project coordinator.

Do I need writing samples?

Not necessarily. A short test article will be used to assess your fit and writing clarity.

Is there a quota?

No. You choose how many articles you accept each week. Some writers do 1–2, others do 5+.

Can I work internationally?

Yes. Writers from all regions are welcome if they are fluent in written English and meet submission deadlines.

Base Salary

$ 8000 - $ 10000
