Writing Gigs Online – Remote Kindle Publishing Assistant – No Experience or Degree Required

Description

Position Summary:

Searching for writing gigs online often leads to scattered opportunities—content mills, Craigslist ads, platforms that pay pennies per word, or “quick cash” writing tasks that go nowhere. If you’re tired of chasing temporary gigs and ready for structured, predictable, and paid publishing work, this opportunity offers a smarter path.

Our client, a global nonfiction Kindle publishing company, is actively recruiting remote Kindle Publishing Assistants. You won’t be blogging, ghostwriting, or writing ad copy. Instead, you’ll follow a repeatable system using AI writing tools, Kindle-formatting templates, and metadata frameworks to create and launch nonfiction books on Amazon. You’re paid per completed book—no cold outreach, no bidding, and no prior writing experience required.

Whether you’re brand new to online work or looking to transition out of unstable freelance gigs, this role provides step-by-step support, consistent work, and real income potential—all without needing a degree or previous portfolio.

How It Works

Each assignment is a nonfiction book project based on keyword demand from Amazon Kindle. You’ll receive everything needed to complete the project, including:

- A topic brief and full chapter outline
- SEO keyword list
- AI writing assistant with structured prompts
- Kindle manuscript formatting templates
- Copywriting swipe files for listings and metadata
- A final publishing checklist

You’ll begin by generating chapter content using the AI assistant. The prompts are prewritten and aligned with the outline. Your role is to polish the output—clean up grammar, remove redundancies, and ensure the content flows logically. You’re not expected to write the book from scratch.

Once the content is cleaned and complete, you’ll format it using a Kindle-friendly template. This involves organizing chapter titles, inserting proper page breaks, formatting front matter, and creating a clickable table of contents.

Then you’ll build the Amazon product listing using fill-in-the-blank templates. You’ll write a subtitle, insert backend keywords, choose categories, and craft a compelling product description. The copywriting is guided—you’ll be following examples, not
